The "Legends of the Old West" series presents a chronological historical account of the development of the human species as a species from the Paleolithic era through to the future. The content of this book is primarily composed of excerpts from various literature sources. The author (James L. Gould, D.D.S.) places particular emphasis on science fiction and on the "end" of the Space Age. "Legends of the Old West" was originally produced as a full-length theatrical play by Joseph Marks. The play ran in the summer of 1981 in the Pasadena Playhouse, Pasadena, California, and in 1982, it was produced by the American Humanist Theatre as a touring production in several parts of the United States and Canada. "Legends of the Old West" begins in pre-historic times, covering the earliest eras of human history, and then continues through to the early Space Age and up to the present time. The major part of the book consists of historical narrative, and only about two-thirds of the book is composed of original content. The historical narrative is composed in first-person narrative mode. The remainder 82157476f
